A good many Odd Fellows are much in favor of following the example of the Free Masons, i. e., during the hot weather, suspending meetings when not absolutely necessary to hold them. Brother Gallacher of No. 10, chairman of the committee, states that no pains or expense has been spared in making the float one of the handsomest and most attractive in the procession. Handsome banners placed around the float will state when the order was organized, the membership up to date, and the amount of money paid out, and financial condition of the order. The float was designed by Brother James S. Anderson and will be built and decorated by Brother Hamlin. All visiting brothers are cordially invited to join the Salt Lake brothers in the parade. Badges will be provided for all and the meet will be at Odd Fellows' hall on Market street at 19 a. m. sharp. Thursday.

Eagle Gate lodge No. 10 has still a few rustlers left, and every indication is that every member in the lodge will turn out. At their meeting on Wednesday last five candidates were initiated, and the applications for two for membership were received and accepted. Brother Gallacher was appointed on the carnival committee and a better choice could not have been made. Brother Gallacher is a hard worker for the order, and one of the oldest members, who has filled all the chairs and is held in the highest esseem by the lodge.

THAT VOTE MUDDLE.

The dissatisfaction arising out of the contest for the most popular ladies to represent Columbia and other popular characters on July 4th was very manifest yesterday. This is not over the result, for the young ladies selected are in every way fitted for the positions and are in no manner to blame for the lamentable scramble into which the context flushy developed. RATES.

In the beginning there was every reason to believe that in the contest would be conducted on fair lines and that every legitimate ballot and no other would be counted. The Herald regrets to record that there is every reason to believe that of the conditions prevailed. As conclusively shown in The Herald of yesterday there were tens of thousands of votes cast that were not legitmate votes at all but simply the work ands of votes cast that were not legatimate votes at all but simply the work of a job press running them off and cutting them by machinery. However, a little reflection must show that the contest was not decided on the ground of which side could muster the most job lot ballots, for anyone must see that a fair count of the enormous number of votes cast on Saturday could not have been counted by the judges in anything like a proper fashion. By the figures at least 100,000 ballots would have had to be handled and for them to be scrutinized and counted in a just manner was not possible by the judges. to be scrutinized and counted in a just ingener was not possible by the judges, however desirous they were of doing their duty. There is no desire to criticise the judges, for The Herald believes they tried to break out of a bad muddie in the best way possible, but still it is not reasonable to believe that even they will contend seriously that they counted eather land estimated. they counted rather than estimated the number of votes cast when that number in one day was 100,009 and when even the result was announced

FROM SIXTEEN TO TWENTY.

Girls Look Only on the Bright and Plensing Sides of Life. A young man addresses to Edward W. Bok the query: "Why is it that in so many cases, I might almost say the majority of cases, a quiet, wellthe majority of cases, a quiet, well-behaved, earnest-minded, religious young man's seriousness is ignored by so many girls (between sixteen and twenty), and the company of giddy, idle, senseless youths preferred?" and in the July Ladles' Home Journal editorial reply is made. Mr. Bok contends that girls at that age take few things seriously, and are not given to looking upon the serious side of life; that only the bright, pleasant side attracts them. "It is only natural that to a girl of such an age the young man of bright conversation, flippant and meaningless though that talk may be, has an indefinable attraction. She would far rather have it that he can dance well than that he can recite Emerson to her. It is the dancing Emerson to her. It is the dancing time of her life, and not the Emerson-lan period. The young man who pays her graceful attentions is pleasing to her; she does not seek to penetrate beyond the mercompilment. And why should she? Young men are simply one form of her amusement; she does not take them any more seriously than she does anything else. The young man of presentable appearance, who dresses well and has a command of the small tak of society, is her girlish Jackin-the-box. The more attention he pays her; the more he flatters her, the better she is apt to like him. The earnest young man who has ambition, who studies and learns, whose talk is sensible rather than light, is a bit tiresome to her. She may respect him. But if she is going to a party she does not want his company. She passes him by for the dance. And is she to be blamed or to be censured for this? Not a bit of it. While she is a girl she does as a natural, healthy girl should; she lives her years of enjoyment and gets as much pleasure out of them as she can. For this she is a girl. But if she lives her years of enjoyment and gets as much pleasure out of them as she can. For this she is a girl.
